ARMY HAS CARRIED A SE-

DEBATE U. S. POSITION

London Papers Ask What Attitude
Washington Will Take on Death of Thresher—Other War News.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, April 2.—The fluctuating struggle in the Carpathians seems to be nearing its decision, according to dispatches reaching London. By successive rushes amid ice and snow
Russian troops are said to have carried a series of Austrian lines, and in the view of British observers, they will soon break through in force between the Lupkow and Uzok passes.

Stagnation in West.
In the west conditions bordering on stagnation prevail. The allies are keeping the Germans in the dark as to when and where the big thrust will come and meanwhile they are speculating as to whether the invaders of France will risk a serious offensive while the situation in the east remains precarious.

The British press, in addition to being universally outraged that the Germans should protest to the American embassy regarding the segregation of the crews of submarines now held as prisoners of war, is making much of the death of Leon Thresher, the American who lost his life in the sinking of the Falaba.

"What will Washington do?" asked today's Westminster Gazette, and other papers debating on the same lines.

As to the week's past operations,
the Dardanelles fight appears likely to be more and more protracted, even the London papers today inclined to admit that the Turkish positions
perhaps have not as yet been seriously damaged.

The discussion for and against absolute prohibition continues on the same lines.

To Announce Note.
Walter H. Page, the American ambassador, is negotiating with foreign offices concerning the satisfactory
date for a publication both in the United States and England of the text of the American note dissenting from the British order-in-council outlawing
the British blockade plan. Next Tuesday probably will be agreed upon, although Wednesday may be selected.

It may be said upon high authority that the note is wholly friendly in its tone.

Joffre Predicts Victory.
Paris, April 3.—General Joffre has predicted a speedy termination of the war and victory for the allies according to a dispatch from Dunkirk published today in the Belait. The dispatch from Dunkirk reads:

"General Joffre, the French commander in chief, in the course of a visit to the Belgian headquarters to decorate certain Belgian officers with a Legion of Honor, told King Albert and Premier de Broqueville war would soon come to a successful
advantage of the allies."

German Statement.
Berlin, wireless to Sarville, April 3.
—German army headquarters today gave out report in the progress of hostilities reading:

"The Belgian attempt yesterday to win back Klosterneek farm, which the Germans occupied March 31, resulted in failure."

"A French charge in the forest of Le Petre was not successful."

"A French attack on the heights
south of Nieder Estach, west of Mul-house, was repulsed. Nothing of importance has occurred on the eastern front."

Italy's Position.
Rome, April 3.—Commenting on the actual official announcement of Petrograd that the Russian government is friendly toward Italy and concedes
the justice of Italy's territorial aspirations, the Rome paper says:

"Neither in Italy nor in the Balkans Serbia or any other Slav state rising from the ruins of Austria to a large outlet on the Adriatic, but nobody in Italy can ever permit the advantages now enjoyed by Austria in strategic positions and maritime trade to pass into other hands except ours."

In regard to possible expansion of Italy in territory where the majority of the population may not be Italian,
this newspaper says:

"There are political and military reasons which overshadow any question of nationality, similar to those which govern the policy of the Spanish Gibraltar, Italian Malta, Greek Cyprus and Egyptian Suez or which caused Russia to desire to install herself at Constantinople."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, April 3.—The case of Wm.
Young Jackson, arrested here on charge of obtaining money by means of a confidence game, was continued
when it came up before Judge Prindeville in the criminal court.

Jackman in recent years is said to have promoted insurance and brokerage companies with aggregate capitalization of $10,000,000, but fifty three cents is all the assets E. W. Hubbard, receiver for the more recent promotions of Jackman, said he could find.

War News Summary

The British embassy at Rome denies the report that Lord Rosebery or any other person is going to Rome on a special mission for Great Britain.

Vienna reports assert the recent fighting in Bukovina has been more important than the official communications have shown. It is said that the Russians who sent in reinforcements have been forced to retreat.

The British steamer Lockwood was torpedoed last night off the coast of Devonshire, England, the sixth ship lost by torpedo or mine which has been reported in the last two days.
The crew was saved.

General Joffre, French commander in chief, is quoted as predicting that the war will soon end to advantage of the allies.

A prolonged lull on western front was broken yesterday. The official German report mentions three small attacks by French and Belgian forces which were repulsed. A German aeo-plane was brought down near Rheims
after dropping bombs on the city.

GERMAN SUBMARINE
PURSUES AND SINKS
A BRITISH STEAMER

London, April 3.—The British steamer Lockwood was torpedoed by a German submarine Friday night off Start Point in Devonshire. The members of the crew were saved.

The steamer Lockwood was owned in London. She was built in 1896 and was of 677 tons and 236 feet long.

Pursued Several Miles.
A German submarine pursued the Lockwood for several miles before being able to gain a position from which she could discharge her torpedo. The projectile struck the steamer below the engine room, but the crew of twenty-five found time to loder a lifeboat. Later they were picked up by a trawler and brought into port.

Norwegian Boat Damaged.
London, April 3.—A letter dispatch from Bergen says the Norwegian consul at Libau has reported to the owners that the Norwegian steamer Leostakken was struck by projectiles during the German bombardment and seriously damaged, Captain Hansland being killed by a shell fragment.

The Leostakken is a vessel of 3, 000 tons, owned by L. Olsen & Company of Bergen.

CUTS DOWN TREE AND

Appleton Farmer Is Cause For Damage This Morning When Tree Falls on Wire.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Appleton, April 3.—A farmer cutting down a tree three miles south of here, did more damage to the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power Company this morning, than any storm the road has ever encountered.

The tree fell across the line, breaking down 50 poles and lowering a mile of wire. When traffic was resumed passenger had to walk
a mile in transferring past the wrecked territory.

RAGING SNOW STORM
ON ATLANTIC COAST

Over Six Inches of Snow on Streets of Philadelphia Which Impairs
Traffic.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Philadelphia, April 3.—The snow storm which struck the middle Atlantic states today became almost a blizzard, worse than any storm of the past winter in this section. At two
p. m. more than six inches of snow
was on the ground. Wire communication with points south and all New Jersey's seashore resorts were later interrupted. Railroad traffic was slowed up and local street car service was seriously interrupted during the afternoon.

PETITIONS IN MAIL
FOR "DRY" ENGLAND

Number of Letters Received by Lloyd
George Favoring Abstinence
Number Over 25 Thousand.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, April 3.—The first morning mail to reach the chancellor of exchequer, Lloyd George, brought about 15,000 letters, virtually all dealing with the question of abstinence from drinking in England. This number indicates the day's total of letters will be in excess of 25,000.

The communications were received by the chancellor in answer to a full page appeal appearing in newspapers yesterday, urging citizens to write him in favor of absolute prohibition.

AMERICAN'S DEATH THROUGH SINKING OF FALABA REGARDED WITH GRAVE CONCERN

Leon C. Thresher.

Officials at Washington regard with grave concern the death of Leon
C. Thresher, the American who lost his life when the German submarine
U-28 sank the British steamship Falaba at the entrance of the Bristol channel. According to the position taken by the United States in its reply to the German notification of a submarine blockade, the destruction of American life or American property through enforcement of the decree would be looked upon as an unfriendly act.

ELECTION PAMPHLET
REPEAL BILL MEETS
DELAY IN ASSEMBLY

Hanson Measure Put veOr for Two Weeks—Bichter Takes Rap
at Taxpayers' League.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., April 3.—Friends of the election pamphlet principle prevailed against an effort made to act on the Hanson repeal bill and the Skogmo measure retaining the primary pamphlet only at yesterday afternoon's session of the senate. After much discussion the Hanson bill was ordered to be postponed for a hearing, which it had not had as required by the rules. Senator Skogmo announced that the bill will be re-introduced without hearing, a committee denied.

Senator Bichter, democratic leader,
made an argument for the principle of the law.

Raps Taxpayers' League.
"We have heard a so-called taxpayers' league in this state, operating from Illinois to escape the tax-practices act," he said. "It has been said that these forces helped to defeat the constitutional amendments. If these rumors exist, it is possible for men of wealth to give aid to candidates under the corrupt practices act,
and thus acquire advantage over candidates who have not this aid. I believe for this reason it should be much easier for candidates not so favorably situated to become candidates for office and have their candidacies submitted to the voters on a basis equal to that of others. I believe this pamphlet method is at least a step in that direction, and that we should hesitate before we repeal it. Reduce the fee
if necessary, restrict its scope,
but not carefully before doing away
with it entirely."

Senator Everett said he was in favor of the Hanson repeal bill, but that the Hanson bill should be heard on it
he believed that courtesy should be extended and the bill not rushed through. The senate thereupon delayed action.

The following bills were ordered engrossed:

Order Bills Engrossed.
Martin—Changing the makeup of the board of public land commissioners in cities, making it consist of the commissioner of public works, city engineer and three citizens.

Martin—Conferring powers of police officers on members of the fire and police commission in cities of the first class.

Judiciary committee—Increasing salary of all judges of the civil court of Milwaukee county from $3,000 to $3,600.

Several weights and measures bills,
including Nos. 417, 419, 421, and 423,
were also advanced.

The following bills among others,
were killed:

Authorizing the mayor
of Milwaukee to appoint a board of review of assessment in the tax department.

Hanson—Providing that county judges shall be removed, for cause, in the same manner as circuit judges are removable.

Judiciary committee—Abolishing
the bill of exceptions in appeals and allowing the transcript of the reporter's notes to be served with a view to an appeal, and to become a part of the record.

Scott—Increasing the salary of jury commissioners from $5 to $5 per day.

Skogmo (joint resolution)—Providing for the calling of a constitutional convention.

Repealing the section which nullifies the old perjury statute passed. The Skogmo bill prohibiting "twisting" in the writing of life insurance policies
was laid over for two weeks.

The senate advanced to third reading the Metcalf bill requiring that all upholstered or re-upholstered goods be branded with a description of the materials used in filling or covering them, the law to be effective Jan. 1, 1916.

U. S. CALLS HOME
ARMY OBSERVERS
ON GERMAN WEST

Garrison Cables Five Army Men With Kaiser's Army to Return Home.
Other Observer Remains.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, via London, April 3.—Five American army observers who have been attached to German military forces in the capacity of observers,
were ordered by cable today to return to the United States at once, the order came as a surprise, the observers expected to remain in Europe until the end of the war.

Leutenant Colonel Joseph E. Kuhn,
the engineer who has been acting as an observer, was not included in the order, as he has been designated a military attaché at the embassy in Berlin to succeed Major George G.
Langhorn, recalled.

The United States officers, since their arrival in Germany on December 20th, have spent two weeks on the western front and one week on the east. These officers, who were called home, are: Major Clarence C. Williams of the ordnance department; Major Dwight E. Aultman of the field artillery; Captain Samuel D. Rockenbach of the cavalry; Captain Wilson C.
Burtt of the infantry; Captain Samuel
G. Shurtle of the coast artillery.

Gives Reason.
Washington, April 3.—Secretary
Garrison said today he had ordered the return of the United States army observers of the German military operations of the German army because their mission was completed. He said no other officers would be detailed with the German army.

Mr. Garrison declared emphatically that the release of five officers on duty with the German army was in no manner connected with the recent release of Major George P. Langhorn.
Major Langhorn was ordered to return to the United States after his mission was completed, he said.

Major Langhorn's signature had been sent to the army college here without his knowledge, Mr. Garrison and army officers, without exception, were taking a strict silence as to Major Lang-horn's withdrawal, except to say it was entirely upon the initiative of the war department.

Officers have been issued recalling American army officers acting as observers with other belligerent armies in Europe.

MEXICAN INDEMNITY

Chicago, April 3.—Miss Elizabeth McManus, sister of John McManus,
the American business man slain by Zapata soldiers in Mexico a few weeks ago, today addressed a letter to Secretary of State Bryan protesting that the indemnity accepted from the Mexican government was too small.
In the course of the letter Miss McManus says:

"I write to protest against the paltry indemnity secured to the widow of my brother John McManus. You as representative of our United States should have set an indemnity of at least $100,000 to secure his little

STORM BALKS DASH
OF GERMAN CRUISER
FROM NEWPORT NEWS

Prinz Eitel Remains at Moorings According to a Government Wireless Dispatch.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, April 3.—A gale and snow storm which enveloped the Virginia capes last night and today did not tempt the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich to make a dash for the sea through the cordon of hostile
cruisers outside, and at one o'clock
this afternoon an official government dispatch from Hampton Roads said
the German raider still was moored to her wharf.

The storm which drew the curtain of secrecy over the Prinz Eitel for a few hours by destroying all means of communication with the Hampton Roads district save by wireless, besides giving Commander Thierochens
an opportunity to resume his commerce destroying voyage, freshly coaled, supplied and equipped, started a crop of rumors and reports which spread widely saying the German cruiser had dashed behind the curtain of snow darkness and passed the watchdogs at the entrance to Chesapeake Bay.

When the government agencies
after much public got in touch with Newport News, it was established the steamer had attempted no new dash exploits, but still furnished a day to day mystery as to her commander's fate.

An official government dispatch receive there by wireless at 1 p. m.
says the Prinz Eitel was still at her wharf when the message was sent.

hearing of the western rate case today, that the railroad's handling cer-

PETEY DINK—THE FELLOW HASN'T LOST ALL HIS SELF-RESPECT.

COLLEGIATE ROWING IS VERY PROMISING

YALE AND PENNSYLVANIA MEET IN OPENING REGATTA AT PHILADELPHIA.

OUTDOOR EVENTS NOW

After Brilliant Season of Indoor Athletic Activities, Attention Will Be Turned to Outdoor Sports.

New York, April 3.—Beginning tomorrow with the Yale and Pennsylvania regatta at Philadelphia, the collegiate rowing season opens with a good deal of promise for interesting contests during the ensuing months until intervarsity honors are decided over the Poughkeepsie course next June. The unusual open winter season has afforded the coaches candidates a much earlier opportunity to go out on the water this year and this in itself should be a potent factor in getting the crews into excellent condition for the coming struggles. The varsity combinations in all probability will be selected earlier and the various crews brought to a higher state of perfection than ever before, when the time arrives for the New London and Poughkeepsie races. Next week the Pacific Coast intercollegiate regatta will be one of the attractions for the visitors to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco and toward the end of the month both Princeton and Harvard will meet the "Middies" in dual contests at Annapolis, Md.

Indoor Events. After a brilliant season of indoor athletics the arrival of the time for outdoor competition is gladly welcomed by the amateurs, many of whom have acquitted themselves more than creditably during the winter months. Boston's big Marathon, the nineteenth annual running of which will be decided over the Highland-Boston course, two weeks hence, will be the first of the great outdoor events of the season. The Boston Athletic Association will furnish an additional incentive for distance runners this year as the winner will be enabled to take part in the Panama-Pacific Marathon at San Francisco next September free of expense. The Boston A. A. in addition to the cup prize will donate a sufficient sum to cover the traveling and other expenses of the victor to the Pacific Coast and return and to the second man an allowance of one hundred dollars will be made toward giving him a chance to compete in the California race. Should the Board of Governors of the Amateur Athletic Union adopt the rule, recently recommended by the General and Athletic Rules Committee prohibiting marathon runners from receiving coaching assistance or refreshments during a race, in accordance with the Federation rule, it may have a deterrent effect on some of the intending competitors and consequently greatly reduce the size of the field which otherwise gives promise this year by being the largest in the history of the event.

Vardon Will Come. Although it was rumored that none of the English professional golfers would visit America this year it seems to be certainly that in addition to Harry Vardon, who has decided to play here, at least three or four others will come over in time to take part in the open tournament at Baltusport Short Hills, N. J., next June. Edward Ray, James Braid, George Duncan and J. H. Taylor are expected to make the trip and their coming will be welcomed by golfers everywhere in this country, where the game is making wonderful progress. Francis Ouimet, the national champion, gained an international reputation two years ago when he defeated Vardon and Ray in the play off of the famous "Triple Tree" for the United States Golf Association open championship over the links of the Country Club, Brookline, Mass., with a brilliant round of 72. Vardon being second with 77 and Ray third with 78. The possibility of history repeating itself with these three players taking part in this year's "open" should make the event one of the most attractive and interesting golf classics that ever has been decided over the beautiful New Jersey course.

At Boston next week the amateur experts will have managed all tennis tournament in which the most proficient will earn the right to play the challenge match for the National honor with the nine time winner of the title, J. H. Gould, of the Philadelphia Racquet Club. Last year Gould, who was in great playing form, won the title of world's champion at this ancient game by defeating George P. Cowie, the professional champion of England. Should he decide to defend his national honor again this year there does not seem to be much fear of his losing out as he has clearly demonstrated that he is always a bit better than the best that can be sent against him.

Judging from the form displayed by Edgar E. Frank, the Pacific Northwest champion, during the eastern tryouts for A. A. U. wrestling championships at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which were held at the Madison Square Garden here two weeks ago, competitors for honors in the 125 pound class will experience some difficulty when any of them goes to the mat with him. Frank is a member of the Multnomah A. A. C. Portland, Ore., and during his stay here was a frequent visitor to the gymnasium of the New York Athletic Club. There his work against men from twenty to thirty pounds heavier, attracted the attention of the members and professionals alike. Frank seems to have mastered all the fine points of the game and all who saw him at the club predicted he would win handsily in the tryouts. He acquitted himself cleverly winning his three trials, semi-final and final bouts in masterly style and was by far the cleverest man in his own or any other class. George Schneider, the professional mat artist, who watched during the tryouts said: "The man waits for his opponent to come to him and used excellent judgment. His combination of the head scissor and bar lock is irresistible. He is the finest looking wrestler of his weight that I have ever seen."

Challenge of Australian. The decision of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association to issue a challenge to Australia this year for the Davis cup, on account of the war, is applauded by the Antipodeans generally as "sportsmanship of the highest degree." Had a challenger been forthcoming it would almost certainly have resulted in the United States recovering the trophy, because Australia would have been without the services of the New Zealanders, Anthony F. Wilding and the Australian, Norman Brookes. Wilding is with the British army in Europe and the one who is back in his home in Melbourne has stated that he will not participate in any international contest during the war. Therefore Australia in the event of a challenger would have had little chance against any American team which was at all representative.

Losses One Game. The Cuban chess champion, J. R. Capablanca, who is on tour playing simultaneously against thirty or more opponents each day, lost only one of 222 games, winning 215 and the other six were drawn. This record was made at Chicago, Cleveland, Washington where he met his single defeat on his second visit. At Chicago he defeated 51 players he won 48 games. Frank J. Marshall, the American champion, in seven successive performances at Chicago, San Diego, Kansas City, Omaha, Tampa, Wayne and Natchez under nearly similar conditions won 172, lost 14 and drew 6 out of 192 games.

LAKOTA CARDINALS, WHO CLAIM STATE TITLE

With a record of eight victories and two defeats on their home floor the Janesville Lakota Cardinals will complete the most brilliant season in the team's history on next Saturday, having just claims to the state title. With their full playing strength the Cardinals have formed an unbeatable aggregation, who have done much to advancing basketball as the favorite winter sport in Janesville.

The Lakotas suffered reverses both at Belvidere and at Monroe by one or two point scores made against the teams named at Janesville. The third game of a series in the winter was won by the Lakotas at Monroe and it is hoped that if the I. A. C. five of Chicago cannot be scheduled here a week from today, Belvidere can be secured to settle the claims between the two fives. Several teams have been playing under the name of the Cardinals during the season and consequently the team's record given below is composed of games in which the full Cardinal team was represented playing under the management of George Caldwell.

Morris Dalton, Edward Atwood and Donald Korst, performed at forward positions. Korst playing in the center, shifting Dalton to guard. Atwood is rated at the best forward in the state and during the season has scored a total of 48 goals in the ten games and the mainspring of the Lakota machinery when it came to scoring. No cleaner player ever caged a basket than Atwood and his sportsmanship has been a credit to the team.

Dalton is easily the most consistent player on the five, being a good floor man, a close guard and an excellent basket shot. The sturdy little "Moosey" scored 18 goals during the ten games and his steller dribbling was one of the Cardinals' strongpoints. At center, Hemming played in every game and ranked second in scoring, making 30 field goals and nine foul goals, being a close rival of Atwood in accuracy of goal shooting.

Edler at guard has been the strength of the team for his wide experience in playing has added the Lakotas in many games. No forward of a rival team has been able to outscore him and his record for baskets in 18 compared to his opponents 12. He is the best dribbler on the team an aggressive offensive player being speedy in all departments of the game. Ryan performed at guard during eight of the games and scored 11 baskets. His guarding was above reproach and teaming with the University of Wisconsin Reserves was the only forward to score over three baskets in one game over him. Fuller played at guard in several of the games and with "Butch" in the line-up the team is composed of the high school team who won the states' championship in 1913.

Of the games the hardest experienced was with the University of Wisconsin Reserves on March 13th when the Lakotas won the rubber with the badger stars by a score of 24 to 13 after a thrilling game. The Reserves were composed of Lange, Chandler, Davy and Skinner varsity players and given evidence of the Cardinals' strength. The defeat given the Lakotas by Troy 28 to 5 is indicative of the Cardinals' strength for while they were outclassed, as was every other team the New York ers played they made the national champs fight for every point they got.

The victory over Company E. of Fond du Lac gave the Lakotas their claim to the state title as the Fond du Lac five were title holders in the northern district. The Company E. five had their full playing strength in the game and no legitimate protest can be made over the result. A game with the A. C. five of Chicago on the tenth would decide the championship of the Northwest for the Chicago five have won the middle western title at a tournament held at Sterling and have an undefeated record. They made a trip to the Pacific coast last month and defeated Oakland, California, claimants to the Pacific coast honors.

FOND DU LAC MEETS GREEN BAY TONIGHT

Fondy Aspirants Win From Menominee, 39 to 34 in Overtime Game, and Are Forced to Limit.

The Fond du Lac team won from Menominee in the state basketball meet at Appleton last evening, 39 to 34 in an overtime game. The crowd looked for the Menominee players to capture the game, until the final moments, when Fondy tied the count. The victory went to Fond du Lac, when being forced to play all the basketball they possessed. Fond du Lac will meet Green Bay tonight for the state title. Green Bay won from Eau Claire in comparatively easy fashion, 29 to 18, thus leaving Eau Claire and Menominee to play for third place.

LOCAL TRIO HELPS FOND DU LAC TEAM OUTCLASS ROCKFORD

Co. E. of Fond du Lac met the Rockford A. A. 3 at basketball at the Forest City last night and romped away in a farce. The score was 41 to 32.

Edler, Hemming and Dalton filled in with water-gate and Fogarty. The first half closed 25 to 10 in favor of the pseudo soldiers and was practically a walkaway. Following the intermission the winners played rings around the Rockford boys. They made a force of the game with Johning teamwork, the intricacy of which dazzled the home team. Fogarty had matters easy and time and time again dribbled down the house with his dribbling. He secured eight baskets; Hemming, three; Dalton, two; Fitzgerald, three and Edler, one; Fogarty also found the wall ring on a Rockford foul.

The A. C. is considered the fastest professional team in the city and lost but one game this season; that to the Belvidere Alumni.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

There are two events in every life which stand out prominently. One is the date of birth, which ushers a new soul into existence; the other the date of death, which closes the final chapter.

These epochs, which mean so much to the individual life, are so common that they attract no attention outside the little circle where our lot is cast, and they mean less today than at any time in the world's history, because the great war, now in progress, has stultified sensibilities, until life represents but little in the way of value.

During the first three months of the exodus from Belgium, the statement is made that thirty thousand babies were born, along the highways. Many of them died within a week for lack of nourishment and through exposure.

This little army of babies came into existence without a home, and while the wives and mothers suffered untold hardships and sorrow, the husbands and fathers were filling the trenches at the front, and many of them rotting in unmarked graves.

This double tragedy had to do with the two great events of life, and yet the world moves on with but little thought of either event. The baby is born and dies by the roadside, the father goes to his last long sleep in the trenches, and the mother, if lucky enough to endure the strain, struggles aimlessly along the dusty highway.

This is but one of the awful pictures daily produced on the panorama which war is painting in such vivid colors, and one of the worst features about it is, that Christian civilization has descended to the level of barbarism, and human life pays the penalty.

The heroism with which men of every creed and no creed meet death, and with which the women of these desolated lands, meet privation and sorrow, is a revelation which the world will not soon forget. It makes a new map of the world, and suggests broader charity for all mankind.

The cost of the war in treasure, for the past seven months is estimated at close to fifty billion dollars, while the loss of men in killed or wounded, or taken prisoners, is placed at seven millions.

Here's a little Easter song by Marian Irving in Leslie's, dedicated to the wounded, back from the front, which expresses the sentiment of the rank and file in the great armies, who are asking in vain, what they are fighting for.

"Back from gory battle came a soldier Easter day,
The streets were full of people in their Easter garments gay;
Silver bells were ringing in the steeples overhead,
The soldier he was wounded, and this is what he said:
It's a long way to glory, it's a long way to go,
From the dim and quiet churches where the Easter lilies blow,
Good-by to home and comfort, fare-well to sweethearts dear,
It's a long, long way to glory, and my heart's right here."

"When the soldier joined the colors he was full of thoughts of home, but he found among the trenches that they never spoke her name.
Coming home upon a furlough with his right arm in a sling,
He was strong for some time, when the chimes began to ring:
It's a long way to glory, it's a long way to go,
The route is marked in crimson with the blood of friend and foe.
There's a girl I want to marry, we have waited 'most a year,
It's a long, long way to glory when my heart's right here."

my heart is here.
"I would rather have a cottage, and a garden, and a cow,
Than a V. O. on my bosom, and a laurel on my brow.
War has led me through his shambles till my soul is worn to rags;
Give us peace the wide world over, fold away the battle-flags;
It's a long way to glory, it's a long way to go,
It's a long way to glory and the hard-est road I know,
From the snowy Easter lilies may the dove of peace appear,
It's a long, long way to glory, for my heart's right here."

This Easter song suggests the significance of the anniversary which all Christendom celebrates tomorrow. Back at the dawn of the Christian era, twenty centuries ago, a baby boy was born in a manger at Bethlehem. From this lowly advent developed the most unique life in the world's history, for it combined and represented both God and man.

The world was slow to receive Him, and after three years of public ministry finally rejected Him, and the tragedy of Calvary was supposed to end His eventful career. Then a strange thing happened, for the stone has rolled away from the tomb where His body lay, and Jesus of Nazareth appeared to His friends and walked and talked with them.

Thus was added to the events of birth and death—common to humanity—that third great event known as the resurrection. This victory over death will be celebrated by song and story in every church tomorrow and Easter lilies will pay tribute to the gladness which the day inspires.

Just that sort of faith sustained the people who lived and died through the long centuries, before the coming of the Christ, may never be known. They had the law and the prophets for a guide, and a conscience which prompted them to do right.

We live today in the bright light of the twentieth century, and while the future is still clouded with mystery, the hope of immortality is a sustaining hope shared by people of every creed and no creed.

The spirit of Easter is the spirit of the Master, and while it culminates in anthems of praise, on Easter morning, it influences thought and action throughout the year. The service tomorrow, in this country, calls for thanksgiving, not only because of the day, but because of the fact that we are permitted to live in a land at peace with all mankind.

The Man of Nazareth was a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. The highest tribute paid to His earthly career was that "He went about doing good." That's an example so easily followed that it may be imitated by every follower, however lowly. Nothing supernatural about it, and nothing unreasonable. Simply helping humanity by the way.

An innumerable host has passed through the tomb and out into the great unknown, since the morning of the resurrection, but no one has ever come back to tell the story of the tragedy which comes to every life but once.

The mourners, who go about the streets, are common in every community. They are entitled to a word of comfort and good cheer, and if possible should be made to share the joys of Easter time.

We sometimes think that our lot in life is hard and that the blessings of life are not evenly distributed. Contrasts are often helpful and aid us to appreciate.

In a little home, not far away, an aged grandmother, bed-ridden and almost helpless, is patiently waiting for the final summons. In an adjoining room a young girl, just blossoming into womanhood, was recently stricken by disease and is making a brave fight for recovery.

The widowed mother, the mainstay of the family, has been obliged to give up her work and devote her time to the care of the invalid. Sad but hopeful she goes about her work with a brave heart, and no thought of complaint.

This is only one of many homes where the burdens of life are heavy, and where a word of sympathy or a deed of kindness would emulate the spirit of the Master.

Easter lilies add to the beauty and significance of the service on Easter morning. They also bring good cheer to the sick room, and are silent reminders of a love for suffering humanity which is Christ-like. May we be prompted to do His work and honor His memory.

A good deal of the "dope" is misleading. If you really want your secret kept tell it to a woman.

The most leisurely parade is that given by the man who has caught a good sized string of fish. Next to that the most leisurely parade is the one given by the fellow who made a home run with the bases full.

ENRICH THE BLOOD

Hood's Sarsaparilla, a Spring Tonic Medicine, is Necessary.

Everybody is troubled at this season with loss of vitality, failure of appetite, that tired feeling, or with bilious turns, dull headaches, indigestion and other stomach troubles, or with pimples and other eruptions on the face and body. The reason is that the blood is impure and impoverished. Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all these ailments. It is the old reliable medicine that has stood the test of forty years—that makes pure, rich, red blood—that strengthens every organ and builds up the whole system. It is the all-the-year-round blood-purifier and health-giver. Nothing else acts like it for nothing else is like it. There is no real substitute, so be sure to get Hood's. Ask your druggist for it today, and begin taking it at once.

Humor finds its expression in various ways. Eliza Bernhart, who is six feet four inches in height, has been called "Shorty" ever since he was a boy.

There is always some talk. The neighbors are saying that the Everett Bromleighs, who recently moved to Chicago, didn't have a cuspidor in their house.

The wonderful mere is the unfamiliar. The trick of taking rabbits out of a hat makes no particular appeal to the man who knows how it is done.

We hereby give notice to all baseball magnates that this season we shall publish only the final results. We are tired of carrying $100 worth of space in return for a pie to witness a punk game, besides throwing in a page of pictures Sunday. We don't care who wins the pennant, and we will refuse to issue an extra every time a star pitcher has the mumps, or sprains his little finger, or all the editors would follow our example. It would stop this big graft game that has been going on for years. We can use our space to better advantage than presenting it free to enrich a bunch of thick-necked lightweights who have worked the press for suckers long enough.

FOR COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT

VOTE APRIL 6TH FOR

O. D. ANTISDEL

To the people of Rock County:

Three times you have honored me by electing me superintendent of our schools, and I have worked very hard to merit this honor, giving long hours every day all the year round to this work, and using hundreds of dollars from my salary to pay for school supplies and traveling expenses. My aims have been to make every school a little better, to give a "square deal" to all, to be a true friend to every one.

In the last few weeks hundreds of people from all parts of the county have stated that they still want me as superintendent; because my work has been done faithfully and well, and they have confidence in me. They know that the work of most teachers and schools has been greatly improved in the last few years. They believe in fair play and justice to one whose whole life has been given to work on the farms and in the schools of Rock County.

Therefore I confidently and respectfully ask for your support and votes. I know the conditions and needs of every school district. You know that I will give you good service.

Very sincerely,

O. D. ANTISDEL.

MOTORCYCLE RIDERS

SHOW WAR STRAIN

Dispatch Bearers Endure Hardships and Face Dangers of Graveside Sort.

London, April 3.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press).—"Almost the only faces with the Army on which the strain of their experience is visibly written are those of the motor cyclist dispatch riders," says a letter from the front, the writer adding "I could give them all the Victoria Cross."

To ride for months at a high rate of speed over cobbles pavements of an extreme unevenness is of itself a physical strain, but this is increased many fold by the responsibilities and dangers which are the daily lot of the dispatch rider.

"With dry roads and only the ordinary peace-time traffic to dispute the right of way occasionally, the motor cyclist can take an ordinary pace with no great strain. But it is quite different when the cobbles are greased by the oil and slime of motor traffic and weeks of rain and fog; when on a ten or twelve inch drop into the narrow roadway; when every road is crowded with great motor trucks which claim the road and take it willingly; when orders are—they always are, apparently—to travel not at a leisurely gait, but at the top speed of which the battered machine is capable.

Add to these little difficulties a blinding rain, a pitch-black night, no lights, a few shell-swept stretches of road, snipers, sentries, obstacles, shell-holes, and other disturbing matters; and there is the picture of the ordinary life of the dispatch rider. Side-slips and collisions, broken forks and headers into shell-holes, are all in the day's work. But what the dispatch rider really objects to, is being shot at by his own sentries. This is by no means exceptional, for the sentry's challenge is quite likely to be drowned by the noise of the engine.

"In the early days," writes one rider, "the wandering Uhlan was a terror, not because of his soldierly qualities, but because you were always liable to find yourself charging at some crossroads in the darkness, into his horse's body. I knocked over several like that, and I never knew how they were going to take it. I think they must have generally lost their horse and gun in the dark, for only one of them ever fired a shot, and he did not fire at me."

Best Hope for Reconciliation. A police justice in speaking before the Women Taxpayers' league of Michigan said: "For some reason I find it easier to reconcile a man and his wife between the hours of eight and nine in the evening, rather than the same hours in the morning. Just why I do not know—perhaps there is a mellowing influence at that time—but it's a fact."

OUR STORIES

this week have necessarily been brief, but they are TRUE. Colleges are buying our loans for endowment funds. Insurance companies use them very largely. Banks right in this part of Wisconsin advise their customers to buy them when they know the customer is dissatisfied with 3 per cent. Lawyers advise widows to put their husbands' savings into them. These people aren't going to buy our investments unless they know they are Perfectly Safe.

George Kleine, who has given the world some of the biggest motion picture spectacles in the history of cinematography, is once more in the limelight. This time, however, it is not a massive "Quo Vadis?" or "Julius Caesar," but a sprightly, lively, up-to-the-minute American made comedy entitled "Officer 666," pictured from the stage success of that name.

"Officer 666" is booked at the Myers Theatre on Wednesday, April 7, matinee and evening. It is Mr. Kleine's first American made production and has been handled in the same lavish way and with the same careful attention to detail that always characterized the Kleine Attractions. As most comedies are easily told in one or two reels, the five parts necessary to the telling of the swift-moving story of "Officer 666" makes the offering distinctive among its kind.

Howard Estabrook handles the lead of Travers Gladwin. Estabrook is one of the best known leading men on Broadway and has been identified with some of the most conspicuous theatrical successes of the past five years, including "Within the Law," "The Dictator," "Brown of Harvard," "The Boss," "Divorcee," and many others. He has been under the management of David Belasco, Charles H. Harris and other of the well known producing firms of Broadway. His first appearance in pictures is the present one under George Kleine's management. Assisting him are the best known players of the part of Phelan, Officer 666 in nearly every city of the United States; Lois Burnett, also of the original company, playing the feminine lead of Helen Burton; Della Connor, a well known photographer, and Harold Howard, also of the original New York cast who is handling the role of Whitney Barnes, Gladwin's best friend.

"Officer 666" is the work of Augustin McHugh and one of the most successful plays of the last decade. Under the management of George M. Cohan and Sam H. Harris the melodramatic farce played four hundred and eighty eight cities during its first tour.

Lovers of good photoplays are assured a genuine treat in the latest Kleine masterpiece.

The 150 ton gun in the 12 inch turret was ready to hurl an $50 pound shell ten miles and even at that distance put it through 9 inch armor plate.

The adventurous photographer stationed so near it was sorry now that he came.

He was about to receive a shock—that much he knew. He knew, too, that he would experience a new sensation, and one that in all probability would be so new that he could not imagine it.

He became nervous. But there was no escape now. Moreover he told himself he was not a quitter.

So his professional self got the mastery. Although he had braced his camera well he forgot to brace himself, and after it was all over the gun crew had to pick him up a rather crippled photographer. After two weeks in the hospital he recovered sufficiently well to tell what little he remembered, but he could not tell it nearly as well as the pictures he secured for Lyman H. Howe, which will be shown in Jansville, at Myers Theatre, on April 9 and 10.

The romance of industry as expressed in the making of a National cash register constitutes another feature of the program. The selected particular plant, not alone because it is typical of American skill, enterprise and organization, but because it is recognized the world over as a monumental realization of an idea and an ideal. The variety of the scenes may be imagined when it is remembered that 30 grades and professions are engaged here in manufacturing machines from $300 different kinds of raw material coming from all quarters of the globe. The registers are shipped to 75 different countries and protect 33 different colonies of money.

The Philippines of today and yesterday—the past and present customs, costumes, dances, habits, etc., of a strange people—forms another noteworthy subject of vital and absorbing interest, besides many other features of rare charm and beauty, not to mention entirely new animated cartoons which always form such a welcome and pleasant diversion.

in the title role, which will be presented at the Apollo on Monday.

Miss Clark with her natural charm and winning personality is so well fitted for the part of the Goose Girl, that the Lasky Company made special arrangements to present her in this one offering, only through the special courtesy of the Famous Players Film Company.

The entire cast is an unusual one containing such leading stars as Sid Dean, E. N. Dunbar, James Neill, L. Payton, E. E. Peters, H. B. C. Carpenter, Ernest Joy, J. M. Cassidy, Miss Johnson and Jane Darwell.

Grethen, the Goose Girl, is not a goose girl at all, but the daughter of the Grand Duke of Ehrenstein and therefore a princess. She has been stolen by a band of gypsies when a baby, brought up in poverty, in accordance with her mother's wish, and executed by Von Herkbeck, chancellor to the Grand Duke, who has substituted his own daughter for the Princess.

The ruler of a neighboring country, in order to prevent war between his country and Ehrenstein, is betrothed to the Grand Duke's supposed daughter. The young King is an adventurous and romantic adventurer at the idea. Destiny interferes and the King rescues the little Goose Girl from insult and falls in love with her. The Chancellor's plot is discovered after many exciting adventures and the Goose Girl is identified as the real Princess, and the union between her and the King is happily made.

Edward Abeles in "After Five" Even Funnier Than "Brewster's Millions."

Edward Abeles in "After Five," the Jesse L. Lasky production of Wm. C. and Cecil B. De Mille's extraordinary farce, breaks all speed limits in laugh-making. It is at least twice as funny as "Brewster's Millions," in which "Eddie" secured his first screen hit under Lasky management, and that is certainly "going strong," and "After Five" has just been released and the report of its fame is traveling like wildfire all over the land. People appreciate the making of a screen farce with funny ideas instead of mere slapstick rioting is a thing of price and a joy.

All the criticisms of this picture bear out the statement that "After Five" with Eddie Abeles as the star is simply immense!

Low Fields in "Old Dutch." On Tuesday, the Apollo presents the 5 part photoplay "Old Dutch," with Lewis Fields in the part of Ludwig Streus and Vivian Martin, the brilliant young World Film star, who has made a great reputation in motion pictures in a remarkably short space of time. It is also included in the cast, in the role of Ludwig's daughter, with scenes in New York and Palm Beach. The producers have ample opportunity to please the eye with rich and suitable settings. Much of the action occurs in a most fashionable hotel at the latter resort and there are introduced quite feasible types of character to be met there.

"Old Dutch" is a lovely character, which in the hands of Low Fields is made life-like and appealing. After years of strenuous effort, he has perfected a device for enabling you to see the person you are talking to at the other end of the telephone. As rich John Rockmoran is financing him, his mind is at rest at last. His darling daughter will now be provided for. So away he and she go to Palm Beach, under assumed names for a rest and change. Here his adventures occur. He loses his pocket book and his identity. Being vaudevillians, a couple of the old man and his daughter, and have the time of their lives whilst Ludwig and his girl are suspected of being fakes and are put to work in the hotel in return for their board. Old Dutch's partner's son is staying at the hotel and he vouches for the bona-fides of Streus and his daughter. The hotel proprietor, however, is inexorable, until Mr. Rockmoran, Sr. comes down to Palm Beach from New York and authenticates Old Dutch. Then the masquerading comedians "get their" Old Dutch is rehabilitated, his daughter becomes the fiancée of the financier's son, and the play ends happily for all concerned. It is a play you cannot but help feeling some regret and sympathy for Bings and Bings, who lost their fortune at the floor not perhaps in the most unsullied manner, but still, opportunely.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

After the close of the Forepaugh show in the fall of '82, which was my first year with that show, I was given to understand by Mr. Forepaugh that I would be expected to report at least two or three weeks before the opening of the show the coming year and assist him in organizing and getting the show ready for the road.

I put in an appearance in the time the following spring and was given a horse and buggy for my own use, and every day would be furnished a list of desired materials which I would be expected to buy for the show the following day. As this did not take much time, I soon made up my mind that I wanted to make a trip to Spring Garden, as that was the winter quarters of the show, and where all the cars, cages and tab-leaus were built during the winter, and also take a look into the ring-barn where Adam Forepaugh, Jr. put in ten hours every day during the winter season training elephants, horses, ponies, and in fact all kinds of animals for the coming season. And in many times at the opening of the show in the spring, Adam Forepaugh, Jr. would spring a surprise not only on the public but hundreds of people belonging to the quarters of the ring barn was the one place where at that time no one had been admitted except Adam Forepaugh, Sr., owner of the show. But as I had been manager for Burr Robinson for three years and practically had charge of everything from the ring barn down, I did not hesitate to drive to the winter quarters and rap on the door for admission to the training barn.

Adam Forepaugh, Jr.'s assistant came to the door and told me politely that no one was allowed in the ring barn. I said to him, "Tell Adam who is here and I think he will allow me to come in." Young Forepaugh came to the door and after a little hesitation said, "Yes, you come in. It looks as though you were going to be a fixture here, and assist dad in organizing the show, so I suppose it will be all right." And it was from this time that I have been in the ring barn before, where many surprises brought out for the coming season, as Adam Forepaugh, Jr. at that time was certainly the greatest animal trainer that the world had ever seen. From that time on when I was not busy around the show, I would drive to Spring Garden, the winter quarters, and put in an hour or two each day watching the new stunts that were being prepared for the coming season.

One of the great surprises among many others that were brought out from that ring barn, was the eight big elephants that were taught to dance the quadrille, and this was done in the winter of '86 and '87. Their first appearance before the public was at Madison Square Garden, New York City, in the spring of '87. This was one of the few acts that was kept before the public for many years, and only a few years ago, perhaps 25 years later than their debut in New York City, I saw the same ponderous elephants still dancing the quadrille. And when I saw the act that I had once since forgotten, I felt like going to the elephants and asking them if they did not remember my watching them in the winter quarters in Philadelphia, when they were practicing the act, twenty-five years before. But this is not to be wondered at when you know something about elephants, for elephants seldom die and never forget.

It was also in this same ring barn that Blondin, the rope-walking pony got his education, and millions of people all over the United States were delighted to watch Blondin in his act. Many other horses obtained their education in this same old ring barn where they were taught to do almost everything but talk. The eight trained stallions which were brought from France to this country, were also put through their stunts two or three times a day, and Firefly, the pony which did the trapeze act, was also educated in the same place.

Young Forepaugh in his work had four assistants, and it was fair to say that during work hours that aside from his assistants, Adam Forepaugh and myself were the only ones that were ever admitted to the ring barn during work hours. But on one act of all these that is still fresh in the mind of the public is the eight dancing elephants which was the greatest feature of all in its day.

By the last of this week or the first of next bill cars No. One of the big shows will be started out for the coming season. Bill car No. 1 is the one that shows the way during the entire season, and is always about four weeks ahead of the Ringling show opens at the Coliseum in Chicago on the 17th of this month, they will soon commence to move at least a part of the show to the Coliseum, and commence getting it into place. Their engagement in Chicago closes May 2nd inclusive, and from there I think the show goes to St. Louis, for several days' engagement. The Barnum show will close in New York about the same time, after which they will make most of the principle cities of the east.

the season, and often give them credit for several thousand people which they did not have. This pleased the townspeople to think that they had one of the best show towns in the country, and this would be heralded far and near. But Adam Forepaugh would never allow this done, in his show. My orders always were, if a newspaper man or even a prominent citizen wanted to know how many people were in the house in the afternoon, or how much we had taken on the entire day, "take the house book and show them the actual receipts," for he always contended that where you lead the public to believe you were taking hundreds of dollars more out of their town than you actually were, that it had a tendency to make high licenses and everything else in proportion. And they always got a look at the door book which gave the actual receipts of the show, afternoon and evening.

The story of the Showmen's League of America, special train to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, as exclusively published in last week's issue of The New York Clipper, had hardly gone the rounds of the various winter quarters of the country when Con T. Kennedy, the father of the scheme and who will assemble the train, was bombarded in Leavenworth, with letters and telegrams from showmen who desire to make the trip to the Pacific coast. It is a trifle early to outline Mr. Kennedy's plans, but anyone that knows Kennedy will take it for granted that the "special" will be all that and then some. The S. L. tourists are sure to be royally entertained at the various stops along the way in Frisco and when the bunch lands in the "Paris of America," Kennedy and his confederates will be handed the keys of the city.

He slowly shook his head and then allowed his chin to sink dejectedly into his hands. With his elbows on his knees he watched her movements in a state of increasing interest and bewilderment. She turned abruptly to the Buddha, whose placid, smirking countenance seemed to be alive to the situation in all of its aspects. Standing close, her hands behind her back, her figure very erect and theatrial, she proceeded to address the image in a voice full of mockery.

"Well, my chatterbox friend, I have pierced his armor, haven't I? He will creep up here and ask you, his wonderful god, to tell him what to do about it, all—e? His wits are tangled. He doubts his senses. And when he comes to you, my friend, and whines his secret doubts into your excellent and trustworthy ear, do me the kindness to keep the secret I shall now whisper to you, for I trust you, too, you amiable fraud." Standing on tip-toe, she put her lips to the idol's ear and whispered. Frederic, across the room, roused from his lethargy by the strange words and still stranger action, rose to his feet and took several steps toward her. "There! Now you know everything. You know more than James Brood knows, for you know what his charming wife is about to do next." She drew back and regarded the image through half-closed, smoldering eyes. "But he will know before long—before long."

"What are you doing, Yvonne?" demanded Frederic, unsteadily. She whirled about and came toward him, her hands still clasped behind her back.

"Come with me," she said, ignoring his question. "He—he thinks I am in love with you," said he, shaking his head.

"And are you not in love with me?" He was startled. "Good, Lord, Yvonne!"

She came quite close to him. He could feel the warmth that traveled from her body across the short space that separated them. The intoxicating perfume flled his nostrils; he drew a deep breath, his eyes closing slowly as his senses prepared to succumb to the delicious spell that came over him. When he opened them an instant later, she was still facing him, as straight and fearless as a soldier, and the light of victory was in her dark, compelling eyes.

"Well," she said, deliberately, "I am ready to go away with you." He fell back stunned beyond the power of speech. His brain was flled with a thousand clattering noises. "He has turned you out," she went on rapidly. "He disowns you. Very well; the time has come for me to exact payment from him for that and for all that has gone before. I shall go away with you. I—"

"Impossible!" he cried, finding his tongue and drawing still farther away from her.

"Are you not in love with me?" she whispered softly.

He put his hands to his eyes to shut out the alluring vision.

"For God's sake, Yvonne—leave me. Let me go my way. Let me—"

"He cursed your mother! He curses you! He damns you—as he damned her. You can pay him up for everything. You owe nothing to him. He has killed every—"

Frederic straightened up suddenly, and with a loud cry of exultation raised his clenched hands above his head.

"By heaven, I will break him! I will make him pay! Do you know what he has done to me? Listen to this: he boasts of having reared me to manhood, as one might bring up a prize beast, that he might make me pay for the wrong that my poor mother did a quarter of a century ago. All these years he has had in mind this thing that he has done today. All my life has been spent in preparation for the sacrifice that came an hour ago. I have suffered all these years in ignorance of—"

"Not so loud!" she whispered, alarmed by the vehemence of his re-awakened fury.

"Oh, I'm not afraid!" he cried, savagely. "Can you imagine anything more diabolical than the scheme he has had in mind all these years? To pay out my mother—whom he loved and still loves—yes, by heaven, he still loves her!—he works to this beastly end. He made her suffer the agonies of the damned up to the day of her death by refusing her the right to have the child that he swears is no child of his. Oh, you don't know the story—you don't know the kind of man you have for a husband—you don't—"

"Yes, yes, I do know," she cried, violently, beating her breast with clinched hands. "I do know! I know that he still loves the poor girl who went out of this house with his curses ringing in her ears a score of years ago, and who died still hearing them. And I had almost come to the point of pitying him—I was falling—I was weakening. He is a wonderful man. I—I was losing myself. But that is all over. Three months ago I could have left him without a pang—yesterday I was afraid that it would never be possible. Today he makes it easy for me. He has hurt you beyond all reason, not because he hates you but because he loved your mother."

"But you do love him," cried Frederic, in stark wonder. "You don't care the snap of your finger for me. What is all this you are saying, Yvonne? You must be mad. Think! Think what you are saying!"

"I have thought—I am always thinking. I know my own mind well enough. It is settled: I am going away and I am going with you."

"I cannot listen to you, Yvonne," cried Frederic, aghast. His heart was pounding so fiercely that the blood surged to his head in great waves, almost stunning him with its velocity.

"We go tomorrow," she cried out, in an ecstasy of triumph. She was convinced that he would go. "La Providence!"

"Good God in heaven!" he gasped, dropping suddenly into a chair and burying his face in his shaking hands. "What will this mean to Lydia—what will she do—what will become of her?"

A quiver of pain crossed the woman's face, her eyelids fell as if to shut out something that shamed her in spite of all her vainglorious protestations. Then the spirit of exaltation resumed its sway.

"You cannot marry Lydia now," she said, affecting a sharpness of tone that caused him to shrink involuntarily. "It is your duty to write her a letter to-night, explaining all that has happened today. She would sacrifice herself for you today, but there is tomorrow! A thousand tomorrows, Frederic. Don't forget them, my dear. They would be ugly after all, and she is too good, too fine to be dragged into—"

"You are right!" he exclaimed, leaping to his feet. "It would be the vilest act that a man could perpetrate. Why—why it would be proof of what he says of me—it would stamp me forever the bastard he—No, no, I could never lift my head again if I were to do this utterly vile thing to Lydia. He said to me here—not an hour ago—that he expected me to go ahead and blight that loyal girl's life, that I would consider it a noble means of self-justification! What do you think of that? He—But wait! What is this that we are proposing to do? Give me time to think! Why—why, I can't take you away from him, Yvonne! God in heaven, what am I thinking of? Have I no sense of honor? Am I—"

"You are not his son," she said, significantly.

"But that is no reason why I should stoop to a foul trick like this. Do—do you know what you are suggesting?" He drew back from her with a look of disgust in his eyes. "Not! I'm not that vile!"

"Frederic, you must let me—"

"I don't want to hear anything more, Yvonne. What manner of woman are you? He is your husband, he loves you, he trusts you—oh, yes, he does! And you would leave him like this? You would—"

"Hush! Not so loud!" she cried, in great agitation.

"And let me tell you something more. Although I can never marry Lydia, by heaven, I shall love her to the end of my life. I will not betray that love. To the end of time she shall know that my love for her is real and true and—"

"Ah, it was a hard thing to do!"

Used that the appeal was to his spirit and not to his flesh—as it had been all along, he was beginning to suspect.

"Wait! Give me time to think," she pleaded. He shook his head resolutely. "Do not judge me too harshly. Hear what I have to say before you condemn me. I am not the vile creature you think, Frederic. Wait! Let me think!"

He stared at her for a moment in deep perplexity, and then slowly drew near. "I do not believe you mean to do wrong—I do not believe it of you. You have been carried away by some horrible—"

"Listen to me," she broke in, fiercely. "I would have sacrificed you—ay, sacrificed you, poor boy—for the joy it would give me to see James Brood grovel in misery for the rest of his life. Oh!" She uttered a groan of despair and self-loathing so deep and full of pain that his heart was chilled. "Good Lord, Yvonne!" he gasped, dumfounded.

"Do not come near me," she cried out, covering her face with her hands. For a full minute she stood before him, straight and rigid as a statue, a tragic figure he was never to forget. Suddenly she lowered her hands. To his surprise, a smile was on her lips. "You would never have gone away with me. I know it now. All these months I have been counting on you for this very hour—this culminating hour—and now I realize how little hope I have really had, even from the beginning. You are honorable. There have been times when my influence over you was such that you resisted only because you were loyal to yourself—not to Lydia, not to my husband—but to yourself. I came to this house with but one purpose in mind. I came here to take you away from the man who has always stood as your father. I would not have become your mistress—pah! how loathsome it sounds! But I would have enticed you away, believing myself to be justified. I would have struck James Brood that blow. He would have gone to his grave believing himself to have been paid in full by the son of the woman he had degraded, by the boy he had reared for the slaughter, by the blood—"

"In God's name, Yvonne, what is this you are saying? What have you against my—against him?"

"What! I shall come to that. I did not stop to consider all that I should have to overcome. First, there was your soul, your honor, your integrity to consider. I could see nothing else but triumph over James Brood. To gain my end it was necessary that I should be his wife. I became his wife—I deliberately took that step in order to make complete my triumph over him. I became the wife of the man I hated with all my soul, Frederic. So you can see how far I was willing to go to—ah, it was a hard thing to do! But I did not shrink. I went into it without flinching, without a single thought of the cost to myself. He was to pay for all that, too, in the end. Look into my eyes, Frederic. I want to ask you a question. Will you go away with me? Will you take me?"

He returned her look steadily. "No!"

"That is all I want to hear you say. It means the end. I have done all that could be done and I have failed. Thank God, I have failed!" She came swiftly to him and, before he was aware of her intention, clutched his hand and pressed it to her lips. He was shocked to find that a sudden gush of tears was wetting his hand.

"Oh, Yvonne!" he cried miserably. She was sobbing convulsively. He looked down upon her dark, bowed head and again felt the mastering desire to crush her slender, beautiful body in his arms. The spell of her was upon him again, but now he real-

"Don't pity me," she choked out. "This will pass, as everything else has passed. I am proud of you now, Frederic. You are splendid. Not many men could have resisted in this hour of despair. You have been cast off, despised, degraded, humiliated. You were offered the means to retaliate—"

"And I was tempted!" he cried bitterly. "For the moment I was—"

"And now what is to become of me?" she wailed.

His heart went cold. "You—you will leave him? You will go back to Paris? Good Lord, Yvonne, it will be a blow to him. He has had one fearful slash in the back. This will break him."

"At least, I may have that consolation," she cried, straightening up in an effort to revive her waning purpose. "Yes, I shall go. I cannot stay here now. I—"

"What, in heaven's name, have you against my—against him? What does it all mean? How you must have hated him to—"

Dinner Stories

The general was inspecting a regiment, the colonel of which was a very bad horseman, and this was well known to his men. The battalion was formed, and as the commanding officer gave the order, "Advance in column," the band struck up the regimental march, with the result that his horse plunged and kicked furiously, and he very nearly was trampled.

As the leading company was nearing the saluting base, the captain glanced around to see if his men were marching well, and was horrified to see the whole of the front two ranks bunched up in the middle and every man watching the commanding officer's efforts to retain his seat.

"Ease off, there!" he shouted angrily. "No 'ee ain't," said a young recruit, "but 'ee soon will be!"

In Skaneateles there lives an old chap known as Uncle William. Uncle William is so famed for his wisdom that whenever anything extraordinary happens the townsfolk always ask: "What does Uncle William say?"

Once a man became ill there and had to go West. Word came back to Skaneateles about the end of the winter that he had reached the point of death. Everybody naturally asked: "What does Uncle William say?"

"He'll live till June," said Uncle

William, oracularly. "Why do you think so?" everybody asked.

"Well," said Uncle William, still more sagely, "he always has."

MILTON YOUTH HAS ABILITY AS AUTHOR

PAUL HOLMES, SOPHOMORE IN HIGH SCHOOL, WRITES INTERESTING STORIES FOR GAZETTE.

SECOND CONTRIBUTION

Is Given in Following Paragraphs Today—First Story Was Published Last Saturday.

The Gazette has been fortunate in securing short, interesting stories from the few youthful authors that break into print. Paul Holmes, a sophomore in the Milton high school, is a thirteen-year-old boy, but he has an ability for writing stories that are attractive and a wealth of good color to them. He expects to enter Milton College. He has agreed to write one story every Saturday for the Gazette, and his first contribution was printed last Saturday, an equally interesting story is given below:

GRANDMA'S JOKE TURNS OUT SERIOUSLY.
(By Paul Holmes.)
"Now, Winsor, you can't shoot that thing around here," he remonstrated Mrs. Thorgate, as her small son, the proud possessor of a new air rifle, paced around the back yard, aiming at everything in sight. "Oh, dear!" she murmured, "I see what possessed John to bring such a thing home to that child. He might 'ave knowed better." "Aw, Gae, ma!" he expostulated Winsor. "What can I do then? This gun's made to shoot, ain't it? I don't see—"

"You've got to go out in the woods where you alone I told him to use it," his mother broke in firmly. "And don't take anyone with you, either. You might hit them," she added warningly. "Punkin' Winsor, in an undertone, vented his disgust at the timidity of the feminine race in general. It'd be all right around here. I wouldn't aim at people or windows or anything. Could I? I'd shoot 'em if I heard what I said," answered his mother in a tone of finality. Then she was struck with a happy thought. "If you go up in the woods, you might find a rabbit or a woodchuck to kill."

This inducement lent a new aspect to affairs. "Gee, I guess I will," was his only comment. A moment later, he was skipping up the street, with his treasured air gun over his shoulder, forming imaginative pictures of the bountiful feast which would be enjoyed at the Thorgate home that night.

Old grandma Schmitz wiped her apron and gazed wearily out of the window. "I do wish Mr. Badie would keep his chickens to home," she muttered to herself. "Land alive, I just got my garden planted and along comes them pests to scratch it up. I do declare, I wish I could do something about it."

She made a dash in the general direction of the garden, crying, "Shoo, shoo!" at the top of her voice, and was rewarded by a fluttering of wings and frightened clucking. "Hello, grandma. See what I got," half started, she turned. "Why, hello, Winsor," she called upon seeing who had addressed her. "How are you today, an' land sakes, what's that, a new air rifle? Where'd you get that?"

"I got it for me from Belleville," Winsor replied, "an' I'm going to use it to shoot rabbits to supper." "Oh," laughed the old lady. She had a very low opinion of the effectiveness of air guns, as well as of the ability of the boy to handle one. "And while you're about it," she suggested, "you might as well kill a couple of these chickens. I'd be glad enough to get some of them out of the way."

"All right," replied the boy, not catching the jocular note in her voice, and taking it seriously. "I'll have 'em dead in five minutes," he assured her. Mrs. Schmitz smiled, contemplatively, and passed into the house, for in a moment the boy and his promise. Not so, Winsor. He with his air-gun "cocked" was slipping stealthily around the corner of the house. "I wonder what she'd do if I did get one," he mused. "Maybe she'd give me a dime." The chickens had returned to the garden and were busily scratching away. Winsor crouched at a certain big rooster. He pressed the trigger.

her—her. And suddenly she remembered that she had told Winsor to kill the chicken. Why wasn't she to blame? Why, the poor lad had really thought she wanted the chicken killed. His grandma told me to 'rose before her. He had only does his best to carry out what he thought were her wishes. He thought she was doing right. This train of thought, gone through her mind like a flash. She answered: "I told him to kill it, Mr. Badie. If you've any kicks, make them to home after this," and she slammed the door.

Winsor's first impulse had been to flee far, far away, but his second, prompted, perhaps, by certain feelings of emptiness, was to go home. It was a white day, and he had that opened the door and entered the Thorgate residence. A sight in no way calculated to comfort him met his gaze. Mr. Badie was standing erect, a frown on his face, and with hands tightly clasped. His father, looking very stern, was pacing the floor.

"You shoot this gentleman's rooster," said he, sternly. "I did 'em up." "I dunno," was his stammering reply. "I thought it was grandma's." "Now, don't try to lie out of it," commanded his father. "Do you know what that bird was worth?" "No."

"It is a full-blood and Mr. Badie has refused offers of ten dollars for it," was the surprising answer. "Now that must be paid back to me," said he, and he interrupted. There was a knock at the door and in walked Mrs. Schmitz. "What do you do, mother," greeted Mr. Thorgate. "Mary is in the other room."

"I didn't come to see Mary. I came to see you," cried the old lady. "Just now, Mr. Badie would come over here, so I grabbed 'em, shawl and followed. The killing 'o' chicken wasn't Winsor's fault, at all, going by with his air of the gun and in fact I told her you one of 'em. They were on my land and spoiling my garden. Winsor shot one of 'em and, although I didn't think he could, nor didn't mean for him to, now I told her, I'm glad of it. They bothered me like everything."

"Hum!" remarked the boy's father. "On your head, I decided to nuzzle to you. That chicken things a little, I guess. Eh, Badie." "Winsor," said his grandmother, "the more I think of it, the more I realize that you have done me. Here is a quarter for you. For the first time since the accident, the boy smiled. She had not even mentioned the window.

STOCK MEET IN MAY FAIR BOARD'S PLAN

JANESVILLE EXHIBITION DIRECTORS INVITE FARMERS AND SONS TO CITY ON THE TWENTY-SECOND.

HOLD DEMONSTRATION

Gathering Next Month Is Preliminary Meeting For Furthering Judging Contest At Fair.

Some things entirely new in the line of county exhibitions will be experimentally upon by the directors of Janesville's big fair this fall. So many innovations have been inaugurated in the tentative arrangements which are rapidly assuming definite form at this early date that it is an assured fact that the Janesville fair will, this fall, be a good forerunner for similar exhibitions in the number of novelties introduced to promote the cause of agricultural and its relative pursuits. Other fairs are sure to follow the lead of the Janesville fair in providing the latter's plans are successful.

Perhaps one of the best innovations to be held will be the series of stock judging contests which as now planned, will be held under two classes of contestants, Junior and Senior, and to give a fairer chance to the younger farm boys. Of this contest of the fair however, more will be given later. A better and of more value to those interested in the raising of blooded horses, cattle and other kinds of stock the directors have arranged for a preliminary meeting to be held May 22 at the fair grounds at Janesville. Under her of well known stock breeders of the county have assured the board that they are willing to bring their stock to the city in order that the different classes can be examined by experts on stock judging will be secured on that date to explain to those present the advantages and value of judging stock and its methods. Prof. J. L. Torney of the University of Wisconsin has consented to help with the work and will bring with him to Janesville a number of experts in the employ of the state institution.

The meeting will be free. A cordial invitation is given to all interested to be present. Through the efforts of Mr. Markham, secretary of the Rock county Y. M. C. A., and D. Antisdel, superintendent of the county schools, publicity to the meet will be given in the rural districts. Mr. Markham will discuss the project at his community meetings while Supdt. Antisdel will, either today or early next week, mail to every country school, circulars explaining the purpose of the meeting.

Those interested in this preliminary lecturing and in the preliminary information Harry O. Nowlan of the secretary of the fair board to permit arrangements being made at an early date for the accommodation of the guests.

Announce Judges.
Announcement was made today of a number of judges who will have charge of several departments of contest judging. Alvin H. Bennett of Illinois will award the ribbon for prize horses; Prof. J. L. Torney of the University of Wisconsin, Agriculture will judge the beef cattle; Hugh G. Van Ball's Dairyman will judge of the dairy cattle and also lecture on this subject; R. L. Komer of Carlinville, Ill., will superintend the swine department at the University of Wisconsin, will have charge of picking the prize sheep.

All selections of the board are eminent in their respective lines. A number have national reputations; Mr. Van Ball for instance being greatly in demand for dairy cattle judging at many state fairs of the middle west. Fair services were secured for the Janesville fair due to the fact that this exhibition is held earlier than other fairs.

A Milk Contest.

Another new arrangement is to have a milk contest. Details on this, however have not reached the stage for publication but contestants who enter are assured that a liberal number of valuable prizes will be awarded.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Editor Janesville Gazette: Dear Sir: Some days ago you published a letter over the signature of Frank R. Morris who, to use his own expression, took a "crack" at the Janesville Board of Education. Under normal circumstances I would pass it by without a reply. But the board of education have authorized me to answer it.

I wish to say that it appears that Mr. Morris does not understand the conditions and facts that he attempts to discuss. In fact, he says that he is much in error when he says that the county superintendent's office was given $5,500 for the maintenance of this office. The $5,500 referred to is the amount asked for by the board of education, and this amount includes salaries of the superintendent, clerks, office and traveling expenses, the expenses of county diploma examinations, salaries of many other members of the board of education and many other items too numerous to mention. And the above amount, it must be remembered, is not for one year only, but for a period of twenty months.

Mr. Morris is even the more in error when he says that the Rock County Board of Education has done nothing but stir up neighborhood rows. His statement in this respect is so far from the truth that it is almost amusing were it not so absolutely ridiculous. This unfounded criticism may be forgiven upon a statement wherein the Gazette recently quoted me as making the statement: "Here rural schools it is a fact that the average of the state." By this statement I meant the school buildings, the general equipment and physical side of every criticism. I have only the highest praise for the teaching ability and general efficiency of the work done by both teachers and pupils. In no county in the state are there better teachers and now are there more country pupils than in our Rock county rural schools. I wish it were understood with emphasis that my criticism of rural schools had nothing to do with the work done in our schools.

As to Mr. Antisdel, the present county superintendent of rural education, I have my opinion that there is not a better qualified man in Rock county for this position. In the work of the past more than proves the statement. As to the salary he received, every member of the board of education when the salary was fixed, felt that without question it was worth every cent of it, and regret was expressed by the board that he could not be given more.

Very sincerely yours,
C. W. SULLIVAN, BOAG,
President of Board of Education.

"Newspapers Serve Better Than Windows" Says Mr. McClurg

Chicago's Largest Book Dealer and Publisher Tells How Concentrated Advertising Forces Bring Success.

Total Advertisement Investment $1,000,000 Yearly.

(By Andrew L. Demling.)

It lacked only a few moments of the time set for our appointment, so we made a record of our own down the avenue to the immense building that had been in sight for a long time, but which had seemed to share with blue mountains and certain other goals, a tendency to retreat just a little faster than we could approach. But, unlike blue mountains and certain other goals, it proved no match for patience and a grim determination, and was finally caught up with.

Making nothing of a couple of massive doors, we took a flight of stone steps three at a time, and disdaining elevators, and burst into the offices with the suddenness of a young whirlwind. So when an undeniably composed young lady informed us that "while Mr. McClurg was in the building, he had only just arrived the other day, and not as yet reached the office, and wouldn't we have a seat and wait a few moments," we accepted gratefully.

Abandons Law, Becomes Book Clerk.
It must have been some time ago that I bowed me over as I was waiting for the elevator down stairs a few minutes ago. "So, if your determination to arrive at your subject now is as undivided and as absorbing as it was to arrive here a while ago, let me hasten as then to accommodate you."

So, I asked him, to tell me something of his father, the late General A. C. McClurg, who he had built up this book selling and publishing business to its present proportions of $1,000,000 a year.

Establishing the fact, father did not establish the business originally. Mr. McClurg began. "Born in Philadelphia, he completed his education at Miami university, and then entered a law office in Pittsburgh where he remained only a year, because of delicate health. So he came west, in 1859, and became a clerk in a book store."

Made Brigadier General.
"When war was declared," he continued, "and was sent into active service. The last three years of the war, he was on staff duty with General McCook. Baird and here, and after numerous advances in rank, he mustered out at the close of the war, and received the brevet of brigadier general."

He returned at once to his position in the book store, and in the following year, 1866, he became a member of the firm, borrowing $10,000 for investment.

Original Capital $42,000.
"After that came a succession of changes, until, in 1872, the original firm was dissolved, and father and I took over the entire business with a capital of $42,000. The prospect from the start, and fourteen years later, his partner retired, and I took over the entire business, which has since borne his name."

Since his death, we have kept as nearly inviolate as possible all his principles and the theories on which he increased his business to its enormous size in a comparatively short time.

"Then he must have been a firm believer in advertising," I suggested, "for the newspapers of Chicago wouldn't look natural to me without a big McClurg ad."

Re-Invest 20% Yearly In Newspaper Advertising.
"He was one of the earliest and staunchest believers in advertising," he replied. "And while the newspapers have only come to be appreciated as the best medium within practical limits for the last 15 years or so, the determination to use them was originally inspired by his confidence."

"Our yearly business now is $5,000,000, all told, and of that we re-invest from 15% to 20% in newspaper advertising."

"You use the newspapers in the publishing business?"
"Altogether. When we spend money advertising in a book, we want that advertising to bring right off the shelf. Magazines are read by the fire-side, or in the hammock, by people who seldom see the advertising in them unless they are actually looking for a special article, and if they do see a book advertisement, they say to themselves they'll get that the next time they have to go down town, or they'll tell some of their folks to bring it to them—and promptly forget all about it."

But put an ad in a newspaper, one that is big enough, and compelling enough to attract and hold the eyes of newspaper readers, and that book is sold. Newspaper readers are keen ad readers, and prompt, ready buyers.

Newspapers Necessary to Retail Advertising.
"The necessity for newspaper advertising in the retail end of the business is absolute," he continued. "We could not do without display windows better than we could without the newspapers."

"Our retail store in the loop is doing an annual business of something over $300,000, and a good 10% of that goes right back into newspaper advertising every year."

"The book and stationary business is not that requires daily advertising, aggressive enough and distinctive enough to identify the establishment for all time with its stock and its principles."

Concentrating Advertising Force.
"The mistake that is very commonly made, and which in advertising is disastrous, I mean scattering one's forces."

"In essence, in this book we're about to publish, according to a neighboring desk piled high with proof, 'we will spend at least $50,000 in the newspapers of this one town before we make any effort whatever outside. And we will profit by doing it that way, on the same principle that we would get wider and stronger ripples by dropping one big plummet into the middle of a pond, than we would by distributing in many lighter and ineffective portions."

"And the principle holds good all through this business—in the retail end the successful man concentrates all his forces into one form of advertising—the newspapers. In the publishing, he concentrates his news-paper advertising in one place at a time, and the ripples spread in all directions."

German Universities Have Big Part In National Life

Washington, S. C. April 3.—The way in Europe, while not completely closing Germany's twenty-one great universities has practically depopulated their class rooms and their professorial chairs. These institutions had, before the war, a total of more than 50,000 matriculated students, the one at Berlin having nearly 10,000 alone. The part played by the German universities in national and international life is described by the National Geographic Society in the following short sketch.

"Among the faculties of Germany's twenty-one universities were scattered at the beginning of the war in the world of learning. The German university was a thoroughly cosmopolitan community, all nations, all thoughts, being represented. American universities since Benjamin Franklin's day. That great printer-statesman-philosopher is looked upon by the founder of the American Colony at Göttingen, a loosely organized student corporation with wealth of traditions extending over more than 400 years."

"Hundreds of young Americans attended the universities of Germany each year, and the young's interrupting of the plans of this student stream will not be the least of the hardships that the great struggle is forcing us to share. The influx of American students regularly began in the early part of April and continued through the summer until the opening of the autumn semester. At such universities as Berlin, Leipzig, Munich, Heidelberg and Göttingen, the student contingent from the United States forms a considerable body."

"The German university is an imperium in imperio—a state within a state. Upon being matriculated in one of these universities, the student becomes a member of an ideal republic of learning; he is responsible alone to the heads of this republic."

and they are responsible for him to the state. The card of membership which the university authorities issue to him is his passport. It protects him from arrest and from the impositions of tradesmen and establishes his identity beyond question before all servants of the state. This card, also, procures theatre and bath tickets for him from him at significant reductions. Furthermore, it establishes his credit with local tradesmen."

"From before the beginning of modern times, Germany has held foremost educational ranks. Her universities have enjoyed international renown since the Middle Ages, while many of the names most prominent in the pedagogical world are German. Today the fatherland is distinguished both for a diffusion of knowledge through all classes, a diffusion that has practically eliminated illiteracy, and for the superior fields of learning."

"Education in Germany costs less than daily fare; in fact, it is regarded by the Germans as necessary as bread and meat. The matriculation fee at a German university is eighteen marks, about $4.50. The lecture courses, as a rule, cost from $1.25 to $3.00, according as there are one or four hours a week. Laboratory fees are extra, but reasonable; and the classes held by the professors are generally gratis. Since 1913, the scale of prices have been increased somewhat for students from foreign lands, but they are still more easily borne than university charges outside of Germany."

"There is no more genuine democracy in the world than that prevailing in the German university community. During his student years the German puts away the income responsibilities and the outward conventions of caste, and lives and chooses his friends according to his fancy. But he seldom carries this democracy beyond his university years."

BEDECK FOR EASTER; FINE WEATHER SURE

Weather Prophets Unanimous That Balmey Weather Will Prevail in This Section Tomorrow.

Janesville's downtown section and the more pleasant walks in the residential districts will be one grand promenade tomorrow. Weather of the brand that prevailed today is announced for Easter by the weather man in his report at Washington last evening. The Milwaukee observatory this morning announced fair weather for Sunday, and even warmer weather. Mildly with the long-plumed bonnet, however, must be careful and fresh winds are also predicted. They will be from the south, however, which is further indicative that the day will be warm.

A snowstorm this morning on the Atlantic coast and throughout parts of New England threatens the display of Easter finery, but there is no indication but what Janesville maidens can come out in safety all bedecked in fashion de luxe, from her shoes to her headgear.

MISS CORA HOLT HOSTESS AT EASTER BONNET PARTY

Miss Cora M. Holt entertained Friday evening at her home on Prairie avenue an Easter bonnet party in honor of Miss Beth McDonald, who is soon to be married. A dainty luncheon was served with table decorations of miniature bonnets and hat boxes. Mrs. F. J. Holt of Edgerton and Mrs. F. J. Holt of Middleton were out of town guests.
